At Last! School Is Off Launch Pad

Tenure Given 2 Principals

In late-hour action Tuesday, the School Committee re-elected Joseph Normandy, principal of South School and Philip Wormwood, principal of Andover High School and placed both on tenure.

Also re-elected was Earl Simon, a first-year principal at South School.

The board will consider teacher appointments at its next meeting.

Bowen Decides On Equal Fire And Police Pay

Andover firefighters and patrolmen will continue to be paid at the same rate, Town Manager Richard Bowen said Wednesday.

Releasing a letter sent to employees of the Fire Department, Bowen reported that he has decided to by-pass a consultant's recommendation that police patrolmen be classified one grade above firemen in a new personnel plan. The manager agreed that in some communities such a differential is warranted, but his final decision was that in Andover there are good reasons for sticking with present equal pay arrangement.

He quarreled, however, with the firefighters' contention that the positions of firefighter and patrolman are necessarily and automatically equal. He also rejected tradition and the habits of other Massachusetts cities and towns as sufficient reasons for equal pay.

In a 3-2 vote, the School Committee gave its approval Tuesday to Building Committee plans for the new high school, lifting the proviso that the OK was subject to review by a School Building Assistance Commission official.

Committeewoman Barbara Moody backed down from her position of a week ago that she would not feel satisfied to approve the plans unless they were checked over by William Black of the SBAC. On Wednesday, to speed progress, the committee supported a motion with this string attached.

The board removed this restriction after it had heard from Building Chairman Robert McIntyre who read a statement which, in effect, tossed the ball to the School Committee.

Stating that his group would not present its plans for formal SBAC study until it had School Committee approval, "without reservation," McIntyre asked for a list of "constructive criticisms" of the plans. Such a list, he said, should be specific and detailed, so that architects could make any changes agreed upon with a minimum of effort.

McIntyre outlined the history of the school to date, reminding school officials that the architects had been working with the educational staff since December to "prepare a set of plans which would satisfy (their) educational specifications; overcome objections of the Building Assistance Commission; meet with the approval of the school staff; and yet remain within the basic guide

Plans Alone Will Sell School To SBAC Official

What does William Black of the School Building Assistance Commission think Andover should build - a soup-to-nuts high school for 1,200, a building with core facilities for 1,800, one with or without an auditorium?

Though he may be willing to answer this sort of question formally for the School Committee or individual members, he was not willing Tuesday to put himself on record as for or against any specifics related to Andover's school dilemma.

School Committeewoman Barbara Moody said of the SBAC official last week: "He wants us to build a school for 1,200." And from School Building Chairman Robert McIntyre came the statement that "Black has the idea that town meeting had no right to kill the auditorium."

And what does Black say? He will not involve himself in a discussion of whether he favors a complete school for 1,200 over a school with classroom space for about that number and core facilities for 1,800. He said Tuesday that he had not as yet studied the latest set of plans prepared for his perusal, and indicated that any decisions he makes will be predicated on what those plans propose in relation to stated needs.

What Black will say for the record is this: "I think any community ought to build a complete school." This, he explains, means that he BELIEVES a town should build a school that incorporates all the ingredients necessary for the school program, including an auditorium. It does not mean he will reject plans at odds with this principle.

Asked if because of this belief, he feels Andover's town meeting had no right to vote a school without an auditorium, Black said, "Gosh no, this is America."

He did, however, question the judgment of a town meeting, any town meeting, that would act contrary to the advice of a committee that has studied a given situation and come out with "honest recommendations."

Does Black object to the idea of building core facilities to serve more than the initial enrollment of a new school? Skirting a flat "yes" or "no" answer, Black asks, "What does the committee mean by core facilities? I find that school officials and I do not always agree about what a core facility is. . . . To me an auditorium is a core facility. . . ."

And what is the state official's reaction to plans that come to him without the unanimous support of a local school committee? That, says Black, depends on what the detractors are for and against.

Black made it clear in a telephone interview that he does not believe local groups should "dump the responsibility (for their decision making) on a state agency."

This was his reaction to the possibility that the Andover School Committee may make its approval of proposed high school plans dependent upon his approval.

"I would be happy to devote all my time to the Andover committee (advising them on their plans), but I don't think this would be fair to the rest of the communities in the state," said Black. "There are local responsibilities that have to be met," he added.

Transplanted Ferrets Breeding In Bay State

The federal government's concern about the disappearing black-footed ferret of the Great Plains may be based, in part, upon searching in the wrong area for this endangered species.

For the same black-footed ferret that seems near extinction in North and South Dakota and Nebraska may be establishing a population in Massachusetts.

JAMES BOND IS BACK IN ACTION - AND SO ARE WE -

"GOLDFINGER"

James Doren Pamela Tiffin
FOR THOSE WHO THINK YOUNG

The killing of one of these rare animals in Pittsfield last winter raised the question of how numerous they may be in the wild in Massachusetts. The animal, which was killed in a duck yard in Pittsfield by a farmer who attacked it with a hoe, was identified at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield as a black-footed ferret. The specimen was taken to Boston where Gilbert Merrill, then with the Museum of Science, identified it as a black-footed ferret.

What surprised most persons who have not kept up with mammal trends in Massachusetts was Merrill's estimate that possibly more than 100 of these small, weasel-like animals are wild in Massachusetts. The mammals did not arrive in Massachusetts on their own. The basic population supposedly came from escapes and releases from a collection of black-footed ferrets being used in experiments here. These animals apparently succeeded in establishing themselves in the commonwealth and now are into succeeding generations.

How the black-footed ferret could adapt to Massachusetts living is a question. At home on the plains, the ferret lives primarily by raiding prairie dog villages. He is an animal of open land. The Great Plains remnant of a once sizeable population, probably never saw a tree in their lives. Generally speaking, no animal succeeds in surroundings so foreign as Massachusetts would be to a black-footed ferret. For such specialized animals evolve through thousands of years into creatures ideally suited to one type of terrain and no other.

The ferret killed in Pittsfield was in excellent physical condition and showed none of the signs of wear associated with animals that have been held in captivity. It was assumed that it was born in the wild.

The U. S. Fish & Wildlife has called upon state and private organizations to acquire wild lands and preserve the habitats of several species now near extinction. It warns that 40 species of birds and mammals have disappeared in the last 150 years, half of them since the turn of the century.

In the East, the endangered species include the Atlantic salmon, the Everglade kite and the ivory-billed woodpecker. Of these, only the Atlantic salmon occurs in New England. It now enters eight streams in Maine - and no other waters in the United States. Once it was so common along the Massachusetts coast and the Connecticut Valley that indentured servants had written into their contracts that they were not to be fed salmon more often than twice a week. Pollution has ruined the salmon range outside of the few Maine streams.

The ivory-billed woodpecker always has lived far south of New England. Intermittently it is reported extinct. The government reports, however, that a few of these huge woodpeckers still survive in Florida, east Texas, Louisiana and South Carolina.

The Everglade kite is a hawk that lives on snails and occurs only in Florida where about a dozen still live. The government established special refuge provisions for them this spring near Palm Beach.

HAWK PRODUCTION HELPS RAYTHEON

Raytheon Company's Andover Hawk missile production plant played an important role in helping the electronics firm record a 30 per cent higher net profit in 1964 than the previous year.

Outlined in the company's annual report, now being received by more than 26,000 stockholders of record, were programs affecting the Andover plant now and in the future.

The Department of Defense, the report said, approved extensive development, under U. S. Army funding, of an improved ground-to-air Hawk missile system - including advanced ground control and guidance systems and an ability to intercept tactical ballistic missiles.

Highlighting the company's 1964 performance, the report pointed out, were improved profits and margins despite reduced sales volume, funding for several new government programs, and entry via acquisition into the refrigeration and scientific data processing fields.

Net earnings in 1964 were $2.2 million, equal after preferred dividends to $1.96 a common share. This compares with operating earnings of $6.3 million or $1.46 a share in 1963. Sales in 1964 were $454 million compared with $511 million in 1963. Both sales figures include those of A. C. Cossor Limited, wholly-owned British subsidiary.

"We feel," said the chairman, "that these plans, without any doubt, meet all the educational specifications prepared by the School Committee."

Making indirect reference to the fact that both the building committee and the manager have been accused of interfering with educational matters, McIntyre said, "They (the plans) represent a development entirely by the school staff. No educational decisions were made, or will be made by this committee."

Moving in with an immediate request for a clear-cut decision, School Committee Chairman Robert Sherman told the five-member board that at a "certain point in a project it is essential to take a position that no more changes can be made."

Making it clear he felt this point had been reached in the school project, Sherman said, "I feel we should measure the quality of the plan by whether the educational specifications have been met."

He reminded members, too, that they had an obligation to the community and the town manager. "We should say 'Yes' or say 'No.' We should not say 'Maybe,'" Sherman said emphatically.

In the discussion that followed, Committeeman William Doherty restated his intention to oppose the school as planned. The veteran committeeman has said frequently that he considers both the school and the budget for its construction too small.

Lined up as opposition, too, though for a different reason, was new member Louis Galbiati.

would turn out to be the difference between the $3.9 million appropriated and what it would take to finish the stadium, fields etc. as programmed.

It was Barbara Moody who finally proposed recinding last week's limited action and made a motion for outright approval.

Questions Answered
Though no direct discussion of four questions directed at all involved with the school project by the Andover Taxpayers Assoc. was held, Taxpayers President Robert Neikirk said following the meeting he felt they had been answered.

These are the questions and the answers Neikirk found adequate:

1. Why do the proposed new high school building plans exceed requirements of the education specifications approved by the School Committee?

2. Who authorized the enlargement of the building beyond the education specifications?

3. Are we going to rob development of play areas to overbuild the structure?

4. What assurance do taxpayers have that the extra building facilities will not require an additional appropriation to complete the job?

The fattening up was apparently the result of the developing of the plans and the consensus of both the school board and the school building Committee, Neikirk decided.

He said he gathered from the discussion of the specs that there is a "degree of interpretation involved as to whether the building is fat or not."

(Barbara Moody said the building has been enlarged in some subject areas to accommodate 1,500. McIntyre said the building contains just four more teaching stations than specified by the committee, largely to allow for expansion in areas where it would be difficult to manage it after the fact.)

Neikirk said he felt the planners has reached a reasonable compromise.

As for the question on the playfield, Neikirk admitted that the Building Committee could not be more specific than it has been until bids are in. Pointing out that McIntyre said his committee would make every effort to build school and all, Neikirk said the builders would have to try their best to see to it that they selected a type of structure that would save enough in costs for athletic fields.

The motion that passed was approved by Sherman, Moody, and Cole, Doherty and Galbiati were opposed.

In presenting her motion, Mrs. Moody pinned responsibility for the judgment that the school planned is adequate on Supt. Edward I. Erickson.

After pressing him for an unqualified recommendation, Mrs. Moody phrased her motion to include reference to the fact that Erickson had said "this is a good plan for 1,200 students. We'll have to place our trust in his judgment..." she said.

MANAGER CLEARS PARTIAL PAY PLAN

of the status quo, Bowen said he accepts the firefighter's argument that there is a significant element of risk in their job and that there are risk differences between patrolmen and firefighters.

"I am also in agreement," said the manager, "that the firefighters should not be penalized because of the extensive training to which they are exposed during normal working hours. I am of the opinion also that the Town of Andover has, in effect, established the manning patterns of the Andover Fire Department for which present personnel should be penalized."

Bowen referred to the fact that local firemen are on a 48 hour week, though many communities provide longer schedules for firemen than policemen because of the number of on-the-job sleep hours involved.

A partial text of Bowen's letter, directed to David H. Batchelder follows:

"I do not accept the suggestion that the positions of Firefighter and Patrolman necessarily and automatically are equal. The major reasons for your suggesting that these positions be assigned to identical pay grades is that of tradition and custom. If this argument is carried to its logical conclusion for pay purposes, then tradition and custom should prevail insofar as working conditions are concerned. I find it difficult to believe that the Andover firefighters would ever be content that working conditions not change, particularly insofar as hours are concerned.

"I reject also your suggestion that, because differentials are not maintained in most Massachusetts cities and towns, such should be not the case in Andover. I feel reasonably confident that it is not your intention that we should be guided absolutely by what other communities are doing. If such be the case, then we must be willing to accept not only the good practices but the undesirable ones as well. I cannot help but feel that, when firefighters of yesteryear were seeking to reduce their work week from an 80 to 90-hour level to a more reasonable number of hours that prevailing practices could well have been used as an argument against these proposals, an argument against these proposals."

The manager did not rule out the possibility of further review as "duties" and responsibilities change.

Adding that he is "much concerned" about morale, a subject for employee discussion since the possibility of the pay differential was first reported, Bowen said . . . "I have no intention of following a pay policy based upon emotion which may have the effect of improving morale in one town department at the expense of poor morale in others.

"Tradition and custom have their places, but we should not be so bound by them as to be unwilling to depart from them. . ."

The School Vote

Tuesday the School Committee voted unqualified, though not unanimous, approval of preliminary plans for a new senior high school.

We feel impelled to take the position that it could have been done in a more clean-cut manner.

A week ago the committee voted to approve the plans subject to review by William Black at the School Building Assistance Commission. This qualified acceptance was urged by Committeewoman Barbara Moody who said she felt teaching stations had been added here and there in sufficient number to make the school adequate for 1,500 students in some subject areas instead of for 1,200 as prescribed. This, she feared, would provide a future excuse for postponement of expansion, and result in the need to curtail certain academic activity because of a space shortage . . . the current situation at the present high school where the population interferes with efforts to provide a balanced educational program.

The vote was inflammatory. The manager and the school building committee made it clear they would carry no more trial balloons to Boston: they told the committee to seek advice, to propose specific changes — to take whatever steps it had to come up with an unqualified decision.

Accusations and innuendos were part of the crossfire, among them the suggestion that the selectmen and the manager were involved in a nefarious plot to influence the building committee and force the School Committee to accept an inadequate building.

The reasons for the rhubarb are many and varied. Not to be discounted is the fact that the project has dragged on until two new School Committeemen are involved in making a final decision on a project they had no part in nurturing. In addition, there is a dissident member. William Doherty has virtually divorced himself from the proceedings since the decision was made to compromise on a auditoriumless school for fewer than 1,500.

Two other factors are basic: responsible for part of the seesawing is the fact that members resent being asked to vote on a set of plans, forewarned that the cost of the building as designed might preclude full development of playfields.

For this they seem inclined to blame the selectmen who whittled $200,000 off the estimated price tag last fall in an attempt to make the school proposal more palatable to voters.

And there was indecision because some felt, but expressed only indirectly, a lack of total confidence in the assurances of school administrators that the school plan was a good one.

We cannot help but feel that there was too much objection too late. The time for the school Committee to seek SBAC advice on design and space relationships was months ago when everything was still in a fluid state.

We agree with School Committee Chairman Robert Sherman who told the committee and Mrs. Moody that to tie strings to the approval at this stage of development was to infer a lack of confidence not only in school administrators but the school building committee and the manager as well.

We will go one step further. To release the plans with such reluctance on the grounds that once approved the School Committee would lose all control, is to infer that the School Committee and only the School Committee is interested in the success of a building project that will benefit thousands of Andover youngsters.

It is to infer that the members of the building committee and the manager are motivated by the budget alone and that they do not share in the concern for the educational program of our public schools.

It is an inference that must be galling to a group of citizens who have given roughly eight months time to a community project.

Anonymity

Last week Town Manager Richard Bowen received an anonymous telephone call from a man who used insulting language to suggest that Bowen should "mind his own business and go back to New Jersey."

This week there have been repeated reports of a telephone campaign waged by nameless callers who oppose tenure for Joseph Normandy, principal at Sanborn Elementary School. It was timed to coincide with the School Committee's annual consideration of teacher appointments and tenure.

Tuesday it was the Townsman's turn: the editor received a call from a woman who attempted to begin a conversation with the words "I want to remain anonymous." She does, but so does her cause, for like any responsible newspaper the Townsman refuses to listen to "tips" and "good advice" offered in this manner.

To infer that a sudden rash of anonymous calls is symptomatic of a major social cancer in Andover would be a gross exaggeration. But we must deplore the local use of such a technique for abuse, in any quantity.

Short of a real and terrifying fear, there can be no justification for individual or group action behind a cloak of anonymity. Certainly there is no public issue in Andover explosive enough to warrant such an emotion.

Plenty of people raise questions and register complaints without creating a public furor. They speak openly (though not always temperately!) to elected officials, the police, the clergy and the press, and in confidence if the situation warrants it. Right or wrong, the man who is willing to submit his ideas with a label is to be respected.

The person who seeks to force solution to a problem through anonymity is a sneak.

Book Awards

The 16th annual National Book Awards were presented recently to these five authors: Saul Bellow for his novel HERZOG; Louis Fischer for his biography THE LIFE OF LENIN; the late Theodore Roethke for his book of poetry, THE FAR FIELD; Eleanor Clark for THE OYSTERS OF LOC-MARIAQUER in the category of arts and letters; and the late Norbert Wiener's GOD AND Golem, INC. was awarded the prize for the areas of science, philosophy, and religion.

This is the first time the award has been made posthumously. At the awards ceremony Stanley J. Kunitz, Pulitzer prize-winning poet, accepted for Mr. Roethke. Jerome Wiesner, dean of M.I.T. and a member of the President's Science Advisory Committee, accepted for Mr. Wiener.

For Mr. Bellow and Mr. Roethke, this was their second NBA. Mr. Bellow won the prize in 1954 for THE ADVENTURES OF AUGIE MARCH; Mr. Roethke in 1959 for WORDS FOR THE WIND.

The prize in each of the categories is $1,000. It is administered by the National Book Committee and the awards are sponsored by the American Booksellers Association, the American Book Publishers Council and the Book Manufacturers Institute.

Memorial Hall Library purchased all these titles as they first appeared, some of them in multiple copies. Andoverians who, after all determine how many copies of a book are needed by asking for it, are to be congratulated on their taste! This very demand means that we cannot make a display of the winners for the books are always "out." However, if you do not find the one you want on the shelf in the NEW BOOKS cases, please feel free to ask for a reservation blank and the library will see you are notified when the title is available. The reservation procedure is handled on a first come, first served basis. Where five or more wish to read the same book, the loan period has been shortened to seven days and additional copies are bought so that we can now get the book you want to you rather promptly.

Children's Affairs

March 25th story hour in the children's room centers around a theme which matches thoughts of spring which just must be coming along soon. Miss Elizabeth Russell has selected stories on the topic Flower Fancies to tell at 3:30 this afternoon. On the program are "The Brook in the King's Garden," and the "Shipwrecked Prince." The latter is from a book of wonder tales from the Far East with the improbable name of THE ELEPHANT'S BATHTUB. The first, by Raymond Alden, come from his well-loved WHY THE CHIMES RANG and other stories.

Story Time

Next Tuesday morning, March 30, the boys and girls in the Squirrels group will gather for a program selected for their ages four and five years old. Since last fall so many have become five that very few are at the lower age now. They will meet with Miss Russell at the regular hour - 10 a.m., Ballardvale.

Littlest Listeners will have a story program at the branch with Mrs. Martha MacCausland, branch librarian as the narrator. The group will gather at Ballardvale branch at ten a.m. today. At that time Mrs. MacCausland will plan the April 8 Easter program with the mothers.

Great Books

A Great Books discussion of Rousseau's ON THE ORIGIN OF INEQUALITY will be held at Memorial Hall Library at 7:30 p.m., March 30. The group, under the joint leadership of Robert Rockwell and Miss Helen Stearns, always welcomes newcomers of the greater Lawrence area who would like to join. It is not necessary to have participated in the series of meetings to attend this one. If you are among those who have meant to take part, but have not as yet done so, it is only necessary to come to the library next Tuesday at 7:30. You will be welcomed. Burt Play Is Produced

A young Andover writer, a student at Ohio Northern University, successfully presented a production of his first play at the Ada, Ohio college earlier this month.

T. C. Burt, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Burt, 62 Whittier St., is the author. His "Beyond the Reach of Evening" was the first student-written play ever to be presented at Ohio Northern and response was such that a tour is being planned.

The former Andover High School student has been writing for seven years. He has turned out 250 short stories, a number of poems and 40 essays, six of which have been published in literary magazines including the Rectangle, a national honorary magazine.

Burt is a junior majoring in English and Theatre. He is editor of Northern's literary campus magazine, a writer for other university publications, president of Northern Players, vice president of the professional English fraternity, Sigma Tau Delta and a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity.

Despite these activities in addition to his academic work, Burt continues to write. He has plans for two more plays which he hopes to have ready for production next year, but will not restrict himself to writing for any one medium. After Ohio Northern, the college junior would like to attend either the University of Michigan or Stanford University graduate schools.

His play has been entered in the National Collegiate Playwriting Contest sponsored by Samuel French & Co., New York.

Women who want to swim just for fun may have the use of the pool at 9 p.m. on Thursdays, after sessions.

For Many Reasons . . .

There are so many reasons for the continued and growing success of the above pictured business. The folks at Village Texaco, 14 North Main Street, Andover have a policy of service for anyone who comes in, whether it is for a map or a grease job. The finest gasoline obtainable, Climatized Texaco, excellent service, plus S & H Green Stamps make an unbeatable combination. And with spring now in the air, there'll be more driving done. The next time you're driving by, stop in and fill up with Texaco at a savings, get your green stamps, and enjoy courteous service from cheerful attendants. They'll check your tires, your battery, oil and water. Your wind shield will be cleaned - all the little services you can really learn to love. And when you get used to them, you'll just find yourself going back and going back to the Village Texaco Service Station. But why go anywhere else? Service, S & H Green Stamps, and Texaco - an unbeatable combination!

Don't Waste Money

Especially if you don't have to! If you are spending too much on fuel oil, perhaps it is time you looked into a new and modern burner. The Martin Oil Company invites you to see the revolutionary Iron Fireman Custom Mark II which can save you one third or more on your fuel costs. How? You save with 100% combustion of the oil. Smoke and soot are unburned fuel. Even when a burner smokes for only a minute or two when it starts, this still results in a substantial fuel loss because a burner starts many times a day. The clean smokeless flame of the Mark II accounts for a large part of its exceptional fuel savings. The Mark II "locks in" stored heat instead of releasing it to the chimney, it releases to the home. Since total combustion releases no soot, service calls are eliminated in 90% of cases. The Martin Oil Company, 39 Oakland Ave., Methuen, is the exclusive distributor of this exceptional unit. The Martins invite you to their showroom where you can actually see this remarkable unit perform. Or ask Mister Martin for some names of folks who are already saving money with this unit. He'll be glad to show some of the many installations in the area.

Beatle Mania

A new word coined by the Columnists to describe the antics of the teen-age fans of the rock 'n roll group called the Beatles is old hat to the folks at Harrison Park Corp., 222 Lowell Street, Lawrence. They are the authorized sales & service folks in the area for the Volkswagen line of motor vehicles, or as they are called - beatles, bugs, etc. And Volkswagen owners for years could have been called victims of "beatlemania", for to own a VW - is to Love a VW - even to the point of mania. And why not? It's a great auto!!! There are VW clubs and VW drivers who wear tieclips, cuff links and what have you emblazoned with the VW emblem. Ashtrays, jewelry and pillows, ties and handkerchiefs, all sold with the ever present VW. Have you ever heard of a Chevie owner, or a Ford owner going in so deeply over his car? I don't think so. What's the reason? Why not visit Harrison Park and investigate this social phenomena first hand? Be the first in your neighborhood to solve the VW-American public love affair riddle. Do it soon.

Atty. and Mrs. Richard Sullivan have returned to their home at 181 Lowell St., after spending a winter vacation at Luguillo Beach, Puerto Rico.

Trip to Jackson's

For most youngsters, a bedroom is more than a place to sleep. It is also a spot to study, to decorate, and most of all - to take pride in. It is unfortunate that such an important place in the lives of our young people is so small and often sadly neglected.

Why not plan to add one sturdy room for the youngsters growing up at your home? This can be done easily. Just take a trip to the Jackson Lumber Company, on Market Street, Lawrence and get the complete line of building materials including lumber, hardware, and paints. Plan and build this room yourself or have it done. You can be sure that all the materials bought here are of the finest quality. They'll make your newly added room serve the purpose and give your home the look of beautiful elegance that you desire.

FOUNDERS DAY DINNER OK'd

campaign. Bowen and the selectmen want May 6 to be the kickoff date for a month of community effort toward a cleaner, more attractive town and they have asked businessmen to spearhead the drive by painting up and cleaning up downtown.

For its part, said the manager, the Town might supplement the normal family trips to the dump with a municipal pick-up that would give townspeople a chance to unload attic, cellar and lawn debris in one big spring move toward a better looking Andover.

William W. Rhoads was appointed to handle dinner arrangement for the Chamber. Selectmen William Stewart and George Heseltine of the Chamber were named to head up plans for the community clean-up and Selectmen Roger Collins and Paul W. Cronin were appointed to a special committee to coordinate both projects and others that may develop involving mutual aid.

In a further discussion of long-range projects and problems, the board and Bowen tried to line up business support for plans to locate the new town hall on the Shaw property, now the site of a municipal parking lot. There was some resistance.

C. of C. directors reminded town officials that a number of them had participated in a self-help move to provide parking at the rear of the Main St. block that houses Hill's Hardware, Michael Jay's and Valentine Flowers, a project that was thwarted by legal technicalities and the lengthy tie-up in Rogers Brook Improvements. The brook runs through one piece of property then involved in parking plans.

Kenneth Thompson suggested that the town take residential property on Bartlet St., facing the park, for town hall and leave the Shaw property to parking.

Officials apparently feel however, that the Shaw property offers the only practical solution to the site problem, short of rebuilding at the location of the present town hall. Discussed instead were alternate possibilities for parking lots.

As part of advance plans for downtown, Manager Bowen asked businessmen present to think in terms of "our own urban renewal." He urged the Chamber to consider establishing some standards of its own for exterior design, sign style, size and placement etc.

For its part, the Board of Selectmen said it would meet with Main Street property owners (as opposed to tenants) to put some official push behind the drive for property improvements in the central business district.

Chamber President A. D. MacLaren told Bowen and the Board that he felt the business community had been offered a "challenge that should be picked up."

"This cooperative spirit," said the president, "is one of the healthiest things that has happened (in Andover) in a long time."

Pack 73 Holds Derby

Forty Cubs entered hand carved model racing cars in a Pinewood Derby model race held by Pack 73 at South Church.

Winners were Steve Cornwell, who received the "Most Original" award for his gold finned racer with its fully exposed engine. "Best Looking" honors went to Kenneth Elowe for a golden jet powered racer.

All entries for this Grand Prix event were painstakingly hewn from a solid block of pine by Cubs working with their dads.

Pack Committeemen Tom Dye and Jerry Cornwell officiated at the finish line, determining in six preliminary heats that the fastest cars in the Pack belonged to Louis Fisk, Dana Gould, Richard Clendaniel, Kenneth Elowe, George Redman, and Michael Mulligan.

After a second place winners consolation race was won by Scott Inman, and a special "Best Brakes" event won by Buz Normandy, the final championship running was held. Top honors for the fastest car in the pack was awarded to a sleek polished racer carved by Louis Fisk.

Pack 73's next activity will be a visit to the aircraft carrier USS WASP in Boston, Sunday, March 28. All Cubs in the Pack are asked to assemble in uniform in the Church parking lot at 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

ALPHONSE TATARUNIS Chorus To Sing For South PTA

The Andover Community Chorus, under the direction of Alphonse Tatarunis, will present its next local concert for the South School PTA April 14. It will be open to the public.

On March 31 the chorus will appear in its seventh concert of the season at the Church of the Holy Name, Swampscott.

Director Tatarunis was educated at Lowell State Teachers College and Harvard University. He has made summer stock appearances with the Arundel Opera Theater and been guest conductor at the New England Music Camp, Oakland, Maine. He has been a soloist for opera performances, at a number of churches and for the Combined Concert in Andover last year.

Tatarunis is director of music for the public schools in Danvers and is also associate editor of the National Student Musician, a newspaper.

Special TM A Prospect

It may take a special Town Meeting to tie up the Killorin property if the town decides it wants the site to relieve the parking situation that some feel will be created with construction of a town hall on the adjoining Shaw property.

Owner Karl C. Killorin, head of the real estate business operating out of the converted home at 77 Main St., filed for a building permit this week to make improvements there. Asked to detail his plans, Killorin said Tuesday that "nothing is definite yet."

To the question, do you plan to add to the building, he replied "it might be an expansion."

The possibility of Killorin's move to further develop a property openly discussed as a possibility for an eminent domain action was discussed by Chamber of Commerce officials meeting Monday with the Board of Selectmen.

There was speculation following Killorin's action that he filed development plans merely to establish a value for the location which could be used for bargaining in land taking proceedings.

• Arthur Peatman, building inspector, said this week he will be out this spring to enforce a town by-law which prohibits the junking of old cars in yards etc. Classified as junk are cars unregistered and left out in the open.

• Thirty-five public school students were winners in the state Math Fair held Saturday at Salem State College Gym. Only one student from Greater Lawrence placed in the finals, a Lawrence High School girl who took an honorable mention.

• Vulcan Corp., Cincinnati, Ohio, the firm that acquired Andover's F. W. Stuart Co. last December, has reported 1964 sales of $9,881,967 and profits equal to 63 cents per share on its common stock. This, said the annual report, represents significant increases in both sales and profits, reversing a profit decline trend of recent years.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

By-laws generally referred to as the Charter states, among other things: "The town manager . . . except as otherwise expressly prohibited by the General Laws of Mass. (-advocates of more Home Rule please note) may reorganize, consolidate or abolish departments, commissions, boards or offices under his direction and supervision, in whole or in part, may establish such new departments, commissions, boards or offices as he deems necessary, and in so doing, may transfer the duties and powers, and, so far as possible in accordance with the vote of the town, the appropriation of one department, commission, board or office to another."

As amazing as the grant is it is real, it is inclusive and it is uncontested to any citizen who can't afford the cost of going to court, its certain effect is to allow the selectmen's delegate to operate our town affairs without a budget as such because money voted for any purpose can be spent for many other purposes however unrelated.

Accordingly, it might appear expedient to the selectmen's principal delegate to set up a temporary, or permanent department of construction, allot to it all the money granted to the administration for construction, then proceed to portion the money in amounts, without regard to town meeting's stated limitations, among the several buildings to be built, including the library.

Further, the delegate can set up various expense accounts from the appropriations and who can say nay? We were informed that the finance committee has no say in checking the validity of such discretionary items as expense accounts.

May we hear from the Finance Committee? A million dollars is a lot of money to set adrift in the Ship of Politics upon the Sea of Good Intentions.
